Preamble of the Conference:

Various countries, at different levels of development, have focused on attracting foreign investment to their territories due to its crucial role in achieving economic development goals. Algeria, like these countries, embarked on economic reforms in the early 1990s, enacting more liberal legal frameworks that included incentives and legal protections for investors to encourage them to invest their capital in Algeria.

Within the same framework and for the same purpose, Algeria has worked to liberalize economic activities through various legal texts related to investment or those directly connected to this field.

We will highlight the recent Investment Law No. 22-18 and its implementing regulations, through which Algeria has relied to increase the volume of foreign investment and diversify the national economy beyond the hydrocarbon sector.

The forum aims to examine and discuss the following issue:

To what extent have the amendments to Investment Law No. 22-18 responded to the need to create a business climate conducive to investment in Algeria, in line with the state's objectives to achieve economic development in its new dimensions and mechanisms?

Objectives of the Conference:

The Conference aims to achieve several objectives, most importantly:

- Highlighting the Algerian state's efforts to achieve economic development based on diversification, encouraging capital investment outside the hydrocarbon sector, in light of the advantages and incentives offered to national and foreign investors by the new Investment Law 22-18 and its implementing regulations.

- Focusing on the new investment principles introduced under Law 22-18.

- Discussing the effectiveness of administrative procedures in facilitating investment projects for investors under favorable conditions.

- Discussing the adequacy of legal protection, financial guarantees, and judicial safeguards to convince foreign investors to invest in Algeria.

- Highlighting the Algerian state's new approach of relying on digitalization in the investment sector.

- Theme 1: legal framework for investment in Algeria.
